Hampstead artist Marianne Nix finds international sales success online

Hampstead artist, Marianne Nix has found international sales success through online art platform, Artfinder, selling 50 of her prints and paintings internationally since she joined the site in 2013. Marianne who has been a full time artist since leaving a career in TV directing in 2003, has sold her work, much of which depicts local scenes around Hampstead Heath, to customers all over the world including the USA, Canada, Australia, Germany, Austria and all over the UK.

Marianne has also been selected to exhibit at the Royal Society of Painter Printmakers Association's Masters' exhibition at the Bankside Gallery, taking place from 1 - 13 November.

Marianne comments:

"It has been incredible to find that as well as a local audience there is also a global audience for my work. Through Artfinder, I have connected with art buyers from both all over the world and right on my doorstep. My Hampstead scenes are popular all over the world too - which is as much a compliment to this beautiful area as to me!"

Jonas Almgren, CEO of Artfinder comments:

"Our mission here at Artfinder is to give independent artists the ability to directly support themselves and to make a living from their art. I'm delighted that so early in the company's growth that we have success stories such as Marianne's. In 2016 our world is smaller than ever and our site is the source of so many amazing global stories of artists connecting with customers, developing relationships that may last a lifetime." Artfinder is the largest global marketplace for original art, connecting over 500,000 subscribers worldwide with 250,000+ pieces of art from 8,000 artists.
